

Final Project Block Diagram

This should include a detailed project design describing in detail the architecture of your project, both hardware and software. This should include block diagrams, memory maps, pseudo code (C and VHDL): everything someone else would need to understand your design. Also include details of your interface. You should have done some preliminary implementation work by this point to validate your design.